GSU to launch anti-spice campaign

By LINDSAY GASKINS

George-Anne contributor

Georgia Southern University is preparing to launch a campaign against spice and is set to announce the rules for students concerning spice starting Oct. 24.

Spice is a newly discovered drug, so there is not a lot of research on it, said

David McDermott of the Alcohol and Other Drugs office.

"It (the campaign) will provide information about the drug, potential consequences, as well as resources available if they are worried about themselves or a friend," said McDermott.

"We have seen the same outcomes of public incidents of spice and we wanted to be on the forefront and be proactive on this issue," said McDermott.

"Our prospective and focus is helping students. Everyone is certainly concerned about it," said McDermott.

Spice is abused primarily through smoking. Its users experience similar withdrawals and the same addictive behavior as marijuana, according to the National Institute on Drug Abuse

Tobacco policy reconsidered

By JONATHAN QUINTYNE

Yesterday, students of Georgia Southern University received a survey in their inboxes about tobacco use on campus.

"The campus tobacco survey is going to go out to all faculty and staff and students and it is basically going to be used to gauge what are people's attitudes towards tobacco use on campus," said America Minc, chair of the Tobacco Free Campus Initiative, a sub branch of the Staff Council.

Due to a recent movement among universities in the region toward tobacco free campus policies, the information from the survey will better inform the Staff Council to make suggestions to Dr. Keel, said Minc.

"We want to know what people think about our current policy," said Minc. "We want to know about people's attitudes and concerns related to tobacco use on campus."

"We will end up using that data to make a recommendation to Dr. Keel, about here's what the campus says about smoking, here are their thoughts," said Minc. "That way we have all the information to make a informed suggestion and then Dr. Keel has the information to make to make an informed decision."

The survey was sent out to students and faculty via email so that participants have the best opportunity to respond, said Minc.

"Everyone will have the opportunity to take the survey. Whether you respond or not is your choice. But everyone is presented with the opportunity to take the website.

"It is a synthetic form of marijuana," said Sergeant Christopher McBride of GSU Public Safety and Criminal Investigations. "There are several synthetic components found inside, five of which have become outlawed."

"We do know it causes anxiety, vomiting, and feeling disoriented. We know it impacts heart rate as well," said McDermott.

"The one that is illegal, there are several compounds within the spice that actually makes it illegal. There is really no way to tell until we take it back to the crime lab and they determine if there are illegal compounds," said McBride.

"New drugs come on the market all the time, so when a new drug comes out, we want our students to be aware," said Joy Hamm, Director Administrator of the Dean of Students.

This drug is not particularly well known, said McDermott, but bringing awareness is critical.

"It is not something most are using but some are and we want them to be aware of it," said McDermott.

containing this drug is considered illegal, according to the NIDA website.

"It has been outlawed by the federal government and is considered a federal drug crime. If you are found with less than an ounce, you are looking at a year in jail or $1,000 in fines; more than an ounce faces $100,000 and/or up to 10 years in prison," said McBride.

"We take those charges very seriously," said McBride. "The thing about spice is the side effects are far worse than regular marijuana and more unpredictable. Those who have been involved in serious incidences while smoking do not remember doing anything."

Spice has been marked as very unsafe, said McBride.

"It is more serious than people think it is," said Hamm. "It has more serious side effects than marijuana."

survey," said Minc.

The Board decided to present the survey to the campus because they saw the importance of getting the opinions of Georgia Southern University students, faculty, and staff before making any major decisions, said Minc.

"We really wanted that information, it's going to affect everybody, the only way to find out how people feel about it, is to ask them," said Minc.

Opinions on the subject of tobacco tend to be apathetic, said Joseph Fatale, a sophomore political science major.

"I personally don't care," said Fatale,

"It's people's lives, they decide to do it."

Some students would not support the ban.

"I have no problem with people (smoking). I used to be a smoker, and I would not support a ban. As long as it's not outlawed, people can do what they want to do," said Adrian Kappel, a sophomore computer science major.

Other students said that they would support the ban of tobacco on campus.

"I would like it," said Erica Rice, junior middle grades education major. "A lot of people smoke on campus. It is a lot of second hand (smoke)."

Minc said the survey will last until Nov. 4.

Students should vote in large numbers

The College Republicans reached out to speak at the Bulloch County Elections Board meeting about getting polling stations on campus last Friday.

The agenda later did not allow for the College Republicans to speak like they planned, but they still attended the meeting.

According to Aron Randall, a member of College Republicans, the board was under the impression that they were only going to bring four or five students.

Randall said the board changed their mind about allowing students to speak at the meeting because of the large number of student attendees, which was 13.

As a result of not being able to speak during the meeting, Georgia Southern University will not have on-campus polling.

Instead, The Blue Goose will transport students to and from polling places in Statesboro, as made possible by The Democratic Party of Bulloch County.

City council is wrong for not allowing students to speak during the meeting to fight for on-campus polling for GSU students.

Students should not let themselves be silenced.

As both students and citizens of Statesboro, it is important that GSU students go out to the polls and have their voices heard about local issues that affect them in Statesboro, as most of them are residents for the majority of the calendar year.

GSU and its students bring both attention and an abundance of economic revenue to the city of Statesboro.

As the economic "cash crop" of Statesboro, it is important that students have their voices heard in the community and fight for their right to vote.

The George-Anne welcomes letters to the editor and appropriate guest columns. Letters to the Editor

Senate denies request from AAUP

Dear Editor:

I am writing to clarify the information reported in your coverage of the proposed shooting range on campus. You referred to Dr. Michelle Haberland's letter seeking information about safety and laws regarding the carrying of firearms on campus.

First, what Dr. Haberland wrote was not a letter, but a request for a discussion item at the next faculty senate meeting. This was sent to the Senate Executive Committee for their meeting.

Second, the request wasn't just from Michelle but was actually from the GSU Chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

The request was a result of a unanimous vote of the AAUP members attending our monthly chapter meeting.

However, we were told that the administration would not allow any senate items coming from the AAUP. We then indicated in the rationale that the request was from the AAUP. We were not allowed to mention the organization in the rationale.

The Senate Executive Committee then removed any mention of the AAUP, added another question to ours, and put it forward with only Dr. Haberland's name on the request. It appeared that Dr. Haberland was the lone rabble-rouser. In reality, she was one of many faculty members who expressed concerns.

The GSU chapter of the AAUP is composed entirely of faculty and retired faculty from Georgia Southern. The last four Faculty Senate Moderators were members of the AAUP.

The senate and Senate Executive Committee have members who belong to the AAUP. The AAUP is pervasive among institutions of higher education. In fact, GSU's section on faculty governance in the Faculty Handbook comes straight from the AAUP Red Book word for word.

American voices not heard by media

Dear Editor,

I was reading the George-Anne today and came across the article about the Bloomberg debate. I was amazed once again at a level of media so small, a college newspaper; we are still ignoring Congressman Ron Paul.

In the article written, not once was Dr. Paul mentioned as the winner or front-runner.

If you go to the Bloomberg website and look at the poll from the debate, Dr. Paul won the debate by over 2,000 votes with the closest contender Herman Cain, with only a little over 300 votes.

Media of all sizes need to start listening to the American people and not the so-called "Main Stream" media's thoughts on who should be our next president.

Let the People decide. I'm not at all saying that all the attention should be put on Dr. Paul, but he does deserve his fair amount of attention just like Perry, Romney and Cain. Americans: Stand up for your rights and your freedom that our founding fathers fought and died for us to have.

Veterans struggle for jobs

There is a trend going on in the United States that's been growing for decades, but has finally hit a critical level.

That trend is the brave men and women of our armed forces not being able to find work after they have completed service to their country. Right now, their unemployment rate is much higher than their civilian counterpart, at almost 12 percent.

This is an outrageous trend that was first documented in the 1960s after the Vietnam War, but has hit an all-time high during the recession.

The problem that most employers are facing is that they don't understand how veterans' military training can be applied to civilian work.

The Obama administration is doing what they do best: trying to throw money at a situation that needs more care than that. They are offering an up to $9,400 tax credit to employers for each veteran that is hired by that company. But employers aren't looking for financial incentives.

What employers want is a better understanding of what each soldier's military training can bring to the company. If they can do that, there is no reason that veterans would not get hired.

According to Alliance International, a recruiting service that specializes in military veterans, veterans are the ideal people for the workforce. They come from a place where they have a high skill set and are required to perform at a top level everyday.

They also excel in punctuality, teamwork and the abilities to work independently and take charge of a task. Employers also value their leadership training, discipline, self-confidence and national service.

These are the men and women who keep us free and protect our rights everyday from enemies foreign and domestic. The least we can do is make sure they are taken care of when they have completed that task.

Students volunteer at Fall Festival in Botanical Gardens

By COURTNEY ESCHER

George-Anne candidate

The Georgia Southern University Botanical Gardens hosted its annual Fall Festival this past Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The theme of the afternoon was "Treasures of the Garden." Kathy Tucker, educational coordinator of the Botanical Gardens, and volunteers from Lorne Wolfe's "Self Leadership Through Service" first year experience class, provided numerous fun activities for children of the community to enjoy with their families.

"I think it's great that we're teaching kids as well as entertaining them," said Cody Allen, volunteer and freshman political science major. "Because the best way to learn is through having fun."

The festival had stations of educational activities and crafts all over the gardens.

At the "Trash to Treasure" station, children learn about recycling newspapers and magazines while making bracelets, necklaces and pots for plants.

The "Flower Patch Treasures" station was lead by student volunteers, who taught the children how flowers grow while helping them make large paper flowers using tissue paper and aluminum foil.

"It's a great, fun way for kids to learn about the environment, recycling and nature," said freshman nursing major and volunteer at the "Flower Patch Treasures" station.

At "Treasures in the Tunnels" freshman volunteer and undeclared major, Meredith Amason, said "Kids love learning about worms and crawling through the cardboard tunnels."

Alex Keen, a freshman and pre-business major working this station said, "I had a great time teaching kids about the benefits of recycling and compost."

A beekeeping station was also kept at the festival. Volunteer John Butler, a junior from Southeast Bulloch High School, taught children about the process of beekeeping and the way that honey is made.

"Gardens are a wonderful thing," said Butler, "more people should plant gardens, but I wanted to do something out of the ordinary. So I picked up beekeeping." Butler has since raised 67 crates of bees and sells his honey for profit.

"Buzzin' Treasures" was a "bee-n" bag toss where kids learned about the process of pollination by playing corn hole.

Matthew Boles, freshman pre-medical major, said, "It's great that the kids get to learn about bees and the environment while enjoying these activities."

At "See like a Bee" kids learned that bugs have compound vision. They tried on glasses that demonstrated compound vision and then tried to differentiate the center of a large paper flower.

"I love this event. It's a great way for the community to get together," said freshman volunteer at this station, Brooke Fulcher, an early childhood education major.

"There's nothing better than walking through the gardens and seeing children have a blast learning," said volunteer Anthony Bianco, a senior biology major.

"The University pays for about half of all of our funding, the rest we have to raise ourselves," said Carolyn Altman, director at the Botanical Gardens.

Check out the georgeanne.com for a full reveiw of all the booths and entertainment.

Monday marked the beginning of the 50th Annual Kiwanis Ogeechee Fair.

The Kiwanis club sponsors the fair. "The Kiwanis club is an international volunteer organization used to help children," said fair chairmen Don Poe.

The fair opened Monday night at 6 p.m. Individuals were allowed to donate either a canned good or $1 for waived admission. All the proceeds went to the Statesboro Food Bank.

Wednesday is "School Day" where all school students get free admission. Georgia Southern University and Ogeechee Technical College students are required to bring current school IDs. There will also be live entertainment and a market goat show starting at 7 p.m.

"The Kiwanis Ogeechee Fair provides students with a sense of community. Georgia Southern students have supported the fair in the past. Some students did build where they volunteered for us. They painted the fair grounds," said Poe.

Friday is "Moonlight Madness" from 8 p.m. - 1 a.m.

Regular admission is $5 for the entire week. Once you enter the fair, you still have to pay for rides, activities, and food.

Tickets for the rides are approximately $1 each. Wrist stamps are the equivalent of tickets. They will be sold for $18 tonight and Thursday, $15 on Friday night, and $20 for Saturday.

Credit and debit cards can be used to purchase tickets and the Amusements of America company will provide an ATM.

"The money goes back into the community; it goes into youth programs like 4H, FFA, and the Special Olympics. Some goes into Georgia Southern scholarships. It is just a great way to build up the community as a whole," said Poe.

There will be numerous vendors and exhibits which include educational and commercial displays, the 4H-FFA building full of mini booths.

The Pancake House will be open and serving pancakes, sausages, fried chicken, candy apples, cotton candy, funnel cakes, deep fried Twinkies and other foods.

Last year the Kiwanis club gave back over $200,000 to different community organizations.

The Kiwanis Ogeechee Fair is located on 16942 GA Hwy 69, Statesboro, Ga.

Eagles beat Furman in historic fashion

Football

The Georgia Southern University football team jumped out to an early lead on Saturday and never looked back, defeating Furman University 50-20.

The Furman offense was held to one offensive touchdown before a late touchdown pass in garbage time by their backup quarterback.

"All week we focused on coming in and stopping the run," said defensive tackle Brent Russell. "Mainly as a defense, we wanted to stop the run and get after them."

Offensively the Eagles had a great performance by a pair of high school teammates, J.J. Wilcox and Johnathan Bryant. Wilcox rushed for 95 and 64 yards respectively as well as both scoring a touchdown in the game. GSU was also aided by a highly efficient passing day by Jaybo Shaw, who passed for 171 yards on six of nine passing.

"Our motivation this week was to put up points and help our defense out," said Wilcox.

"I was fortunate enough to be carrying the ball this time," said Bryant. "Most of the time I'm blocking, but whatever I'm doing I try to do it to the best of my ability."

The special teams for GSU had a great game as well. The Eagles blocked two kicks in the game, including a blocked field goal that swung the momentum after a kickoff return for a touchdown that brought Furman back within one point in the first quarter. Adrian Mora set the NCAA FCS consecutive extra point record after the fourth score of the game, and then added on two more extra points later in the game.

"We as a special teams unit like to take every kick as the most important one that is coming up," said Mora.

Furman rolled up over 400 yards of total offense versus the Eagles, including 217 yards through the air by two-time Offensive Player of the Week Chris Forcier, but the Eagles forced a red-zone interception and a turnover on downs to limit the scoring of the Paladins.

"Kids did a great job in the second half of just really fighting and keeping them out of the end zone and scoring enough points to stretch the lead. We just played a really solid second half, and I'm just proud of my guys for that," said head coach Jeff Monken.

Georgia Southern University Eagles' kicker Adrian Mora broke the FCS record for consecutive extra-point kicks Saturday in the rivalry game against the Furman Paladins.

Going into the game, Mora was three shy of tying former Montana Grizzlies kicker Chris Snyder's record of 126 consecutive extra points.

With 9:18 left in the second quarter, Mora tied the record after a 14-yard touchdown by slot back Johnathan Bryant. After making two more field goals, Mora came onto the field after a one yard touchdown on a quarterback sneak by Jaybo Shaw. With 6:39 left in the third quarter, Mora kicked the ball through the uprights, giving him 127 extra points, and a place in FCS history.

"He's a solid, solid football player," coach Jeff Monken said. "He's as good as anybody on our football team playing his position."

"We, as a special teams unit, like to take every kick as the most important one," Mora said. "We were focused and I never had any doubts that it was going to go through. Having a bunch of reliable guys makes it a lot easier."

Mora increased his new record to 129 after touchdown carries by running back Robert Brown and quarterback Ezayi Youyoute. He also kicked a 49-yard field goal in the third quarter, which is the longest field goal of his career. After the game, Mora was given the record-breaking football.

"They got the record-breaking ball, and I wish I could split it with all 11 guys because it's definitely a tribute to them," he said.

On Monday Mora was named Southern Conference Special Teams Player of the Week.
